The technical specifications of the material were consistent with those requested by the customer, the quotation, the PDF, colour proof accepted, and the data sheet will determine the final product, which the customer is obliged to accept. The colour test is an optical printing made on paper and plotter, which will determine exactly the measurements and the approved design, but in terms of colours is approximate and never is equal to the printed label for production.

16. Because off production process, sometimes the glue can make small stains that could be seen in designs dark or very shiny.
17. While cans are produced, some small paper pieces can appear, even with our cleaning systems, some of those can remain in, so we beg who receive the cans to have some cleaning system to be applied before introducing the product itself.
18. Sonoco Iberia is responsible for delivering the cans in the correct conditions, but in any case, can be responsible for the content and neither for the potential negative effects that the incorrect use of the cans could cause in the content itself.

20. Our cans are suitable for food, and so we have the conformity declaration. Otherwise, some foods can contain some additives with different behaviours against the can walls; it is for that we recommend each customer must make his own tests to verify everything goes correctly.
21. Labels with designs that have a lot of ink need a finish with high protection, such as UVI or PP, in order to avoid that in the production process or subsequent handling of the container, it skips the ink when closing top or bottom.
22. In case Sonoco Balsareny does not manage the labels and these are purchased by the customer, Sonoco Consumer Products Balsareny will check the conformity of functional margins and sizes of the labels, but will not take into account the texts, colours, finishes, paper type or other specifications.
